AMAZING ESCAPE OF AN EXPRESS. Race to Avoid Disaster.

A disaster which would certainly, have had ecrious results was averted in un extraordinary manner on the North-Eastern Railway on Saturday evening, Nov. 8.

The train which would have been involved had a smash occurred was the dining-car express which leaves Edinburgh at 2.20 p.m. and reaches King'scross at 10.45.

This train, writes a member of The Daily Chronicle staff who joined the express at Darlington was, while travelling at a considerable speed, held up suddenly a short distance beyond Northal-Yerton. The large number of passengers pravelling in a fairly Leavy train did not suspect that anything was wrong, but when the stoppage became a lengthy one -it lasted for an hour-several passengers made inquiries as to the cause of the delay. It was then stated that the express had narrowly escaped sunning into a light engine and two carriages running on the same line and in the same direction, and that a collision was only averted by the prompt pulling up of the express.

ENGINEMEN LEAP FOR SAFETY. Subsequent inquiries, however, yielded an' extraordinary story. It is believed that there was only a light pilot engine on the line in front of the express, and it was stated that the driver of that engine noticed the approach of the south ward-bound train. He saw that he was being rapidly overtaken, and he acted with most commendable promptitude and presence of mind. He put on full steam, and at the same time opened the engine's throttle. " While he did this he warned his fireman, and together the men"the driver with a samp-jumped from the engine, which at once began to race forward at greatly increased speed.

The driver at once began to wave his lump as a danger signal to warn the expross, and at the same time ran towards Northallerton Station.

There an official on duty saw this signal, and having seen the pilot engine rush through without driver or fireman, promptly seized a lamp with a red light and signalled to the driver of the express to stop. The train was quickly drawn

The pilot engine had run on, but the opening of the throttle made certain that is would not run far, as, after the first dash forward at greater speed, steam would soon be exhausted and it would

It was found on the line about eight miles farther south and was removed. The express then proceeded and reached King's-cross an hour late. Few of the passengers knew anything of the danger from which they had so narrowly escap-

Scotland Letter than truth."

DR. JOHNSON'S ANTI-SCOTTICISM.

Houghong, Dec. 9, 1913.

(From Our Scottish Correspondent).

In his brilliant assay on "Johnson without Boswell," Professor Raleigh treats rather lightly the tradition of Dr. Johnson's. anti-Scottish prejudices. Boswell, the professor suggests, took the Doctor too seriously, and attributed to a hostile feeling a hat was really due to a playful humour. stirred into activity by the presence of a Sout, whose sensitive nationality kept him for seeing that he was only being tensed by way of a joke. But Johnson had an anti-Scottish prejudice long before he saw h s future biographer. Boswell explains his agitation and embarrasament at their first meeting by his recollection of this his literary career, and with whom he mainprejudice, of which he had heard much. "J. C. L." in the "Glasgow Herald" takes Strahan. Bishop Percy, who knew him up this familiar theme, which yet is ever intimately, testifies that no man was more new, and tells the old story in a fresh visited than Johnson by natives of fashion. Johnson, he says, had a very poor opinion of Scotland as a country. He familiarly with several distinguished men looked at it always with a procais and utili. on this side of the Border, and says terian eye. For its natural beauty he had never been unkind to me." After his no feeling, and its apparent poverty inspired | Scottish journey he writes to Boswell to tellhim with contempt. He was writing all his friends "how well I speak of Scotch ironically when he saked in "Loudon," his Scotch beauty and of everything Scotch but earliest poem, "Who would change the Scotch outcakes and Scotch prejudices." rocks of Scotland for the Straud!" But | Ilis visit to Scoland did not alter his he was perfectly in earnest when he said to opinion that Scotland was a poor country the Rev. John Ogilvie, "Sir, let me tall you, the achiest prespect which a Sectah proud people than when he said to Richard man ever sees is the high road that leads Cumberland, "I give you leave to say, and him to England," His fourney to the Hebrides modified at some points his opinion of the Scottish people, but hardly wanted of Johnson's capability of friend. affected his estimate of the land. "You, country," he said to Sir Allan M'Lean, "consists of two things, stone and water. There is indeed a little earth above the stone in some places, but a very little; and the stone is always appearing. It is like a man in rage, the naked skin is still peeping out." And when he was asked at Auchinleck how he liked the Highlands, he answered, with some irritation, "How, sir, can you ask me what obliges me to speak unfavourably of a country where I have been hospitably entertained? Who can like the Highlands f like the inhabitants very well." When Boswell said to him on one occa sion. "Pray, sir, can you trace the cause of your antipathy to the Scotch ?" h. answered curtly, "Sir, I cannot." it may well be that the roots of this antipathy were buried deep in childish im pressions that lay beyond the reach of memory. Johnson was only six at the time of the Jacobita rising of 1715. Stafford shire is a lite near to Lancashire and Lichand hatred of the wild men from the field no great distance from Preston, which was reached by the rebel forces. One can readily imagine how much mingled fear North may have been instilled into the child's mind by what he my and in the quiet cathedral town while Jacobites were advancing. But there were times when the doctor was quite prepared England and their appr priation of what proper share of the good things that Eng. of Buis's accordancy-witness Wilker non writes to Baretti in 1761. " has been ready favoured them more than the English will contentedly endure." And ab a dinner party, when some patriotic grouner had an claimed. "Poor old England is lost," h amented that old England is lost as that the Scotch have found it." Nor was inly the ancous and progrinence of the cots in England that sunoved him, but heir intense spirit of nationality. To this se refers again and again. The Scottist catriotism on which they prided themselves re described as projudice and regarded as one of their worse faults. The amusing Cutlery. &c., Brass Fenders and Fire was an Englishman who was more am- Club chemploneting

Another fault of the Boots in Johnness. He disliked their way of standing Scotchmen, that Pootchmen shed be as entit sepecialis offended him he a linears of "a Social conspiracy in national falsehood," and declared that the Souts "loved

Dr. Johnson's anti-Scotticism real, but after all it was a prejudice of the head and not of the heart, a prejudice against the Scottish people and not against individual Sootsmen. For the Soots whom he knew he seems almost invariably to have had a true appreciation, passing in some cases into esteem and affection. He dwelt frequently on the prejudices of the Scot it and the faults of the Scotch, but was quite alive to their good qualities even as outpared with Englishmen. "Much," said he. may be made of a Scutchman if he be caught young." Once he remarked to Boswell, "You would not have been so valuable as you are had you not been a Scotchman." Of the six amanuences he engaged to assist him in compiling his dictionary no fewer than five were Scotsman -surely a remarkable fact. Not less significant is it that the two publishers with whom he had most to do in the course of tained very friendly relations, were both of them Soots-Mr. Miller and Mr. Scotland, and there were none for whom he had a greater regard. He corresponded of them. " My northern friends . have But what finer compliment, saks Professor Raleigh, could be have paid to a poor and you may quote me for it, that there are more gentlemen than shoes in Scotland." and if a 'single and signal example is ship for a typical Scot, Beawell himself is the conclusive instance.

DEATH OF A POPULAR SHANGHAI RESIDENT.

Widespread regret was experienced yesterday, says the " N. C. Dally Nows " of the 18th inst., when the news was received that Mr. A. M. Maclean had passed away. Until last Sunday he had been in a tolerable state of health, but he was then taken to hospital suffering from an attack of pneumonia and pleurisy, and by Thursday his condition had become very critical. At five o'clock yesterday morning death supervened. The deceased, who was thirty-five years of age, was a native of Greenock. Upon leaving school he entered the shipping business, and gained his early training in the office of the Gulf Line in Glasgow. from here he went to Antwerp, and for some time remained on the Continent In 1901 he joined the firm of Messes. Butterfield and Swire, and coming to the Shanghai office remained in that service until 1910, during which time he had the to give reasons for his prejudice. He well deserved reputation of being an exbjected to the descent of the Scots upon | tromaly sound and able shipping man. In 1910 he severed his connection with Taikoo, and joined Mr. A. L. Anderson land had to offer, In so doing he was only as a stock-broker, and had been on the choing a feeling that had become very Stock Exchange ever since. Letterly b ceneral among Englishmen since the time had not been in the best of health although he was at work until Saturday. During the day it is supposed that he ong in the hands of the Scots, and has al. | had comtracted a cold, which rapidly developed into pneumonis. In sport Mr. Maclean's activities were considerable. For yours he was one of the best known coaches on the river, and his services as our were keenly sought after. His coached and coxed the Talkoo four on several occasions with the utmost success, and for two or three years was also coson to the Scottish bosts. On the golf links he was a well known figure, and had been playing until quite thing was and Boswell himself my the recently. THE POPULATION OF JAPAN. Large Excess of Births Over Deaths.

One or two interesting observations on the movement of the population in Japan appear in the course of an article which the French writer, M. Pierre Leroy-Beaulieu, contributes to the Economiste Francais. He starts with the question whether the same laws that regulate variations in the population of Europe, which are now well known, are applicable to the immense mass of Asistic peoples? The question is, he says, the more important in that the decline of the death-rate having necessarily a certain limit, whilst that of the birth-rate has not, the European nations, those at least of the centre and of the west, are tending towards a stationary position if not to a falling off in numbers, and their numerical inferiority vis a vis the peoples of Asia runs that risk of being dangerously accentuated if the same influences that operate in their case do not come into force in regard to the Asiatic races also. Unfortunately, reliable statistics are rare in Asia, but those of Japan are fairly good, and the writer proceeds to dissect those relating to the year 1910. As a result he finds that the excess of births over deaths "in that country is about 650,000 a year. The absolute increase is thus liess than that of Germany, which was in the same year 879,000, but which fell in the following year to 740,000 and rather tends to shrink. It is naturally also less than that of enormous Russia, but it is much larger than that of all the other countries

TWO STRIKING FACTS.

By the side of this rapid increase two striking facts stand jout. One is the large number of divorces in Japan. "In France there are only 14,000 to a little over 800,000 marriages, which would correspond to 20,000 for the number of marriages in the Land of the Rising Sun; whereas, nearly 60,000 are actually recorded in Japan, or more than thirteen for every hundred marriages. But religion and customs are different in Japan, and therefore M. Leroy Beaulieu thinks no-conclusion-can be drawn-from this fact. The other singular feature of the Japanese statistics is the enormous number of still-births. In France there are usually only about 86,000 to some 800,000 living births, and in Germany 56,000 to about 1,900,000 living births. Thus Japon has sensibly less living pirths then the Germanic Empire and almost three times as many still-births. It has, on the other hand, a little more than "double the number of the births recorded in France, and four and a half times as many still births. Apparently the writer is at a loss to account for this

HIGHEST PERCENTAGE OF BIRTHS:

But the most important figure of all is that of the percentege of births THE CHINGE EVANUELUST OFFICE, 52 Japan-83.9 per 1,000 inhabitante. Thus the percentage of Japanese natality is much higher not only then that of France, England, Belgium, and the Scandinavino countries, but also than that of Germany, Holland, Switzetland, and Italy-in a word, than that of all the bountries of the centre and of the west of Europe. The countries of Eastern, and some countries of Southern Europe are the only ones who still possess a higher natality than that of the subjects bf. the Mikedo And if the Japanese natality is high without being, in fact, extraordinatily high; the death rate is medium-lower than that of the Eastern countries, and than most of the Southern European countries, higher than that of at athe south west corner, and which England. SECRETS OF THE TOWER The Dungeous to Ro. Opened to The Visitors to the Tower of London will shortly be able to view some of the most interesting parts of the historic fortiess which have so far been closed to the public. It was on April 3, 1875, that the Tower was first thrown open to visitors, and now, nearly 40 years afterwards, announcement is made that the White Tower Dungcons and the Bloody Tower will for the first time be on view. The question of opening the Byward, Salt, and Broad Arrow Towers is under consideration, but it is not yet possible to state when this will be done.

There is possibly no part of the Tower of London likely to appeal more strongly to sightseers than the Bloody Tower. The story of the young Princes and their nurder, which provided the structure with its ill-sounding name, is one which known to every child, and a peculiar or of mystery has, always attached to a closed tower. From the upper winlow of the Bloody Tower access is obnined to the Constable's Garden, where ir Walter Raleigh was allowed to take

A Globe representative was informed n November 3 that some structural terations will be required before the ower is opened. In one part a rail ill be necessary to protect visitors. One the most interesting relics in wer is the Axe of Office which was rried before a prisoner as he rought from his trial. The Lieutenant the Tower, watching through cophoics in the walls of the Traitor's Gate, could see from the way in which the are was held whether the prisoner land been acquifted or condemned.

FAMOUS COLLECTION. The White Tower, the central dest portion of the fortress, contains the chapel of St. John, one of the enriest, as well as one of the most imressive specimens of Korman architecare in the kingdom, and the famous collection of armour and ancient aims, which is displayed in the Banqueting Hall and Council Luamber. Releigh is said to have been confined in one of the rooms on the first floor during the time wrote his " History of the World. he White Tower itself has, of course, een open to the public for many years, and among the gruesome relies which re inspected by thousands are the are with which the -url of Essex is said to have been beheaded and the block at which Lord Lovat know on Tower Hill o receive the fatal stroke.

The waults now to be opened were ormerly used as prisons and torture mambers. Here the rack was freely emproved, and the holes in which the intrument was fitted still exist under the carding of the floor. When the beauiful Anne Askew was racked the Lord lianculor of the cay himself gave a urn of the screw. Tradition states that r Walter Raleigh was confined in a cell here for twelve years; while in the "ison, well-named " Little Ease," Guy awkes was ricked until be confessed. will be realised that before theme lungeons are thrown open to the public. teps have to be taken to facilitate gress as well as entrance. As an attendant said. It's easy enough to prople in, but the trouble is to get them out egain." On January 24, 1886, the White Tower was the scene of the ly namite explosion for which Cunning Lang and Burton were afterwards sentoneed to penal servitude for life. The explosion occurred at two o'clock in the diemoon and sixteen visitors were To reach the Byward Tower, which Greater Stringency in Law Of Publication.

"The control of reports and literature of a demoralising tendency," was the subject of an important conference held At the Guildhall Editors, librarians, publishers, and news-agonie were all represented, and there was also present a representative of the Home Office.

Bishop Boyd Carpenter, who presided, observed that he understood that the Government had received very favourably suggestions concerning legislation on the subject under discussion, and if he was not mistaken a Government measure was already in preparation, which would have the effect, he supposed, of producing greater stringency in the law regarding publications which might be looked upon as objectionable. They did not want to render so stringent the conditions of life as to press over-hardly or over-severely upon the general taste of the public. Nothing, he thought, would be more disastrous than that a feeling should get abroad that there was a small cotorie of people watching overjealously on behalf of what were supposed to be the morals of the people. In the long run is was public opinion which would settle questions of this kind. They must remember that they were only touching the disorder perhaps in a mistaken manner, unless at the same time they tried in every possible way to promote such lofty standards of personal and public life as would prevent the circulation of questionable literature and advertisements.

ATTENTION TO THE STAGE.

Dr. Russell Wakefield, the Bishop of Birmingham, said it was no good dealing with literature unless they paid attention also to the stage. He pointed out that there were many publications which got into the hands of people apart from libraries. He did not himself suggest for a moment that if they could get every public library in the country to accept their chairman as consor of what should be there that they had got to the end of the question. It was less the actual matter neontained in some books than the suggestion and the method which led to an immoral tendency.

They could discuss in a book the most intimate matters, if they did it in the right way, but they could discuss also the most moral thing they could taink of, and if they did it in the wrong way it could have an immoral tendency. He preferred Rabelais to Boccaccio-that was his point of view in the matter. The worst books, the books that did most harm, were the books that suggested and not books that dealt direct with some very difficult question of morals. The whole question he believed to be one, not of those who desired what was not good for them; but it was the indifference of public opinion to all these social and moral questions. They had got to get through the press, and, if he might say so, through the parson also, a really educated public opinion, and then; he thought, a great many of their difficulties would be solved.

Mr. A. G. Gartiner declared that an enormous amount of good might be done in schools-much more than was done at present—in order to justil into the minds of children the taste for pure literature and good literature. He looked to the school, even more wan to the press or the pulpit, for improvement in that direction. " Speaking of certain papers which published reports of unsavoury cases, Mr. Gardiner said the publication of the garbage of the street by a few papers. papers which desired to keep a certain standard to rotain that standard." He was not making a general charge, for La regard to publication of reports was extremely high. damage for a while the author's reputation modern demands for progress. tion, it also might increase the sales of bitter hatred with which the Home Office, remarked that very little could be done by legislation. He did not see how a bill of a criminal character could deal with so wide a question as books of a demoralising tendency. Mr. J. A. Spender urged that the purveyor of notious literature, should be dealt with, not literature itself. As to foreign classics, great literature was its own antiscptic. If they could get people to read great classic literature, they would find it is own corrective. Mr. Dorton, speaking for the pub lishers, said overy publisher should be the consor of his own work.

THE P. AND O. CHAIRMAN.

The "Times" Financial Supplement recently contains a curious series of statements about Sir Thomas Sutherland, the ed in a vicious little paragraph which chairman of the P. and O. RUBBER RIVALRY.

The latest accusation brought against the Malay rubber plantations is contain-Truth " culls from the " West Coast Leader" of Peru. Here it is:-

It was periectly legitimate to develop great rubber plantations in the Malay States in competition with the Amszon product, to messure quality against quality and cost of production ber markets of the world, but it was scarcely legitimate to set aside from the vast treasure that was invested in Malayan rubber during the "boom days a certain percentage which went towards the manufacture of that elaborate repainted "Jack-in-the-box," the Putumave fair.

The 'West Coast Leader is written in English," remarks "Truth," " and any - Englishman could write or print such incredible rubbish is beyond me. Of course, one knows that the Peruvian press is largely venal. One knows too that in Peru a charge of corruption conveys no particular stigma unless on the man who sells himself too cheaply. But one would have expected any person who had sufficient knowledge of English life and English ways to be aware that even the whole of the money invested in Malayan rubber would not have sufficed to buy the cotice English press, to say nothing of Sir Edward Grey, Sir Roger Casement, and a Select Committee of the House of Commons." We think "Truth" has said all that is necessary. "Malay

It is true that, owing to injuries, the Edinburgh team were handicapped, but even when both sides were complete the Glasgow fifteen were superior. They cwed everything to their forwards, who in the open played a really great game. Not that the backs were negligible; in attack they were dis tinetly efficient and in defence remark ably dependable. The Edinburgh near ranks suggested possibilities, but their efforts were not sustained enough to end in auccess. Greenock Wanderers never deserved to keep first place in the list of Rugby results, their engagements being mostly against second-rate teams, and they suffered a defeat from Heriotonians.
